

I am writing concerning the prospect of implementing federal regulations or legislation which would lessen the impact of Indiana's Telephone Privacy Law. Prior to its implementation it was not unusual to receive 5 to 10 calls during the dinner hour and several more into the evening hours. I got so bad that everytime some mispronounced our name we would say that the caller had the wrong number. Rudeness was not uncommon and after a while it was not difficult to respond in kind. In any event, I am happy with Indiana's law and my family's and my quality of life - particularly in those hours when all you want to do is unwind from the day - has improved. Please do nothing to weaken Indiana's curent law.

Thank you - John M. Marnocha
